AFFAIRS IN THE CITY AND VICINITY.

Lecture on the Progress of Haman Destiny. The reventh lecture on this subject was deli sered Monday evening by the Rev. Dr. Dewey. He commenced by alluding to certain painful evils which existed in the world, and asked what effect they had in aiding human progress. Could it be supposed that the Maker of the world foresaw all there, and that sin and pain were agreeable to him, and in accordance with his benevolence? Might act they believe that God would have prevented there things, had there not been obstacles in the nature of them? They were the same obstacles that Flato spoke of under the form of necessity, as something inevitable, and interwoven with the constitution of things, preterwoven with the constitution of things, preventing the exclusion of evil from the world. He appeared to think that the erigin of evil was the true and only solution of the dark problem. He spoke of a malignant being as having introduced evil into the creation, and alluded to a dark and obstinate matter as the source of evil. That idea seemed to have pervaded all antiquity. We found him speaking of necessity, is reference to the control and accomplichment of divine purposes; and that the universe received its construction and present order not by virtue of an irresistible coercion, but that they were things unavoidable. The lecturer then reviewed the subject of physical pain. The law was that pain was general; it also warned us of danger, and therefore stood at the cutside of the citadel. It harmed us, but it saved us from worse harm. It made us careful, and gave a sest to our energies. Every wise man knew that the infliction of suffering was a comfort. Cicero said that there was nothing so great to him as his death. If pain were not inevitable, it was necessary to human happiness and virtue. It was impossible for general laws not to work inconvenience. The law that was good for all must expose some. It hay at the foundation of nature. What constituted natural distinction—a difference, for instance, between a Frenchman and an Englishman? It was not situation; it was something in the blood and bone, and in the temperanent. It was well that nations had separate governments and institutions, working out experiments for themselves, which might enure for the benefit of the whole. French literature could not properly be introduced into this country, though works of learning and science were given through learned men. He said that nature kept a strictor account than we thought of. We never did wrong with impunity. Case of the evils regarded was death, and since there was no subject buried so deep in where striction as that, he was convinced that the man we thought of. We hever and wrong with impurity. One of the evils regarded was death, and since there was no subject buried so deep in a persition as that, he was convinced that the whole meral order of things hung upon that. There were one or two difficulties which pressed upon that subject—they were isolation, suffering, and dread of death; the feeling that all the human energies were buried in an event, was isolation. We were not dismissed one by one, and this fact was an in-bortant one in human culture and society. Where of death; the feeling that all the human energies were buried in an event, was isolation. We were not dismissed one by one, and this fact was an important one in human culture and society. Where would be the fruits of experience if mankind desirted from the world in families? Such a system would take away the inheritance of property and the world would fall Illness was a necessary premonition. He thought that the present system of death was a most merciful one. There was a life in death which transcended even death itself, and he believed in that life more than in death, and it would bear him up. The lucturer next alluded to politics and to idolatry. Some views had grown up with us—for instance, that the worship of animals by the enlightened Egyptians was a degradation; it surpassed our belief. They were worshipped as symbols of the gode, and the worship of idols, became se gross that it was denounced by the Hebrew prophets, fough no doubt at one time the Hebrews reverned images. This kind or worship fell off during the latter ages of Greece and Rome, so much so, that their inhabitants did not regard the religion of heir forefathers. Then with reference to sacrifices, now necessary they must have been to worship. Despotism reigned in the ancient world, and republies died away throughout it; there was no conception of equal rights of men. He considered that an excess of homage was better han the epposite extreme. It was an established fact that all our laws were liable to he grossest evils. The reverend gentleman hen touched upon the subject of war, and asked fit had a good effect upon human progress; there had been personal corruption and licentiques. Pacific means were available at the present day, but, in former ages, they were unincligible. War had also been a medium of interiourse and of communication of ideas. In ancient imes nations laid side by side, and yet were more gnorant of each other than those of the opposite amisheres at the present day. There had been vils relieved by war which could not otherwi ense to them and the reverse to us, had been atended with effects upon the government of man kind. The great word "reform" was to be sum moned up, and it had been summoned up in al ages. The reverend gentleman closed his distourse with some general remarks.

Polk, alia James Hartley of the Signal of years of age, individual of an attempt to cannot be proposed to an attempt to cannot be proved to an attempt to the 20th January last, was tried and acquitted The prisons had been arrested together with one Charles Villers, alias Veorhies, alias George Dickenson, a man of full age, who is in outdood on the same charge, but at present lying sick at the Hospital. The officer, Issae Mead, of the Tenth ward, had observed Villers, on the right in question looking through the shutters of the store, and atterwards trying the lock; and having obtained the assistance of another officer, they shortly afterwards arrested both prisoners and took them to the station house. In the powersion of Polk they found a picklock, chinel, and two skeleton keys; on that of Villers, a pair of nippers two picks and some matches. He then returned and aroused Mr. Allen, when it was seen that the key had been pushed out of the door and was lying in the passegs. It exhibited marks of the nippers found on Villers. This instrument, which was produced, was newly made, and admirably fitted for the purpose. The ends of it are circular and hollowed, so as to fit round the edge of a key, and on the indices are sharp teeting of graphs. EXTRACOUNANY SCENE IN A COURT ROOM.—An unusual scene occurred in the room occupied by the Jourt of Oyer and Terminer, Wednesday afternoom. Shorely after two o'slock, a tremendous crash, resembling the explosion of a steam boiler, startled the audience, judges and jury from their usual propriety, who made a grand rush towards the door, and in their eagerness to get out, some laughably ridiculous scenes tock place. One of the jurymen who was so troubled with the gout that he could with difficulty walk by the aid of crutches only, was the first out of the scene of supposed danger, and the constable of the Sixth ward, who had just left a bed of sickness and was hardly able to walk into court in the morning, was second best in the race. Another offiser of the court fell on his hands and knees in the scramble at the door, and the members of the bar, jury and antisence tumbled over him pell mell, while the presiding judge retreated to a closet to avoid the impending danger. The scene was superbly ridiculous, and the prisoner at the bar, who was on trial on the charge of arron, and an Irishman, the principal witness against him, were the only ones who retained their self-possession, and gazed with astonishment upon this extraordinary scene of confusion. The cause of all this great commotion was the falling of a beam from the cupois of the City Hell (which is being repaired) upon the tin roof over the court room, which made all the rackst. As soon as the cause was ascertained, the court reassembled, and the cause before it was proceeded with.

As soon as the cause was ascertained, the court reassembled, and the cause before it was proceeded with.

Kinc's Courty Court or Over and Examinar. Sefore Judge Morse. H. A Morse County Judge, and Justice Brown - Feb 15 - Couvietion for arson in the third degree.

John Baldwin was placed on trial this morning on an indictment charging him with arson in the second degree. It appears that the accused is a house carpenter, and was in the employ of Stephen 6 Jackson, as a journey man during last summer. About half past eight o'clock on the night of the Zoth of October, 1851, an unfinished house nearly adjoining the residence of a Mrs Nugent, belonging to Mr Jackson, situated on De Kalb avenue, was discovered to be on fire; a moment or two before its discovery, the prisoner was seen coming from the house, and a few minutes afterwards, when the flames began to burst forth, was pursued and arrested. Upon being searched, some matches were found in his possession corresponding with others in the house. Previous to the fire, the prisoner made use of language which went to show he was not on the best terms with his employer. Stephen C Jackson, Thos. Crow, Capt R. W. Calt, of the Fourth ward police, and other witnesses, were examined—the above being the principal facts elicited from them. The court charged that it appeared from the evidence that the dwelling house in which Mrs. Nugent resided was within nine feet of the building fired, coverquently the jury must find whether the defendant was guilty of areas in the hind degree. Sentence reserved.

Contemplated Military Change.—It has been for come time considered essential to the well-being, future prespectly and regularity of the military of Long Island, to have the mounted portion separate, and under a distinct command from that of the infantry, and for that purpose, Captain Graham brought the matter before the Military Cummittee at Albany, who fully concurred in the necessity of the alteration, and, as it was understood by all concerned agreed that the present troops should form the basis of a new dragoon regiment; but a subsequent understanding of the matter induced Captain Graham to proceed to albany again, and on this constion he went armed with the written approval of simest all the officers of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth regiments, their commanders the Brigadier General. Major Dillon, and the officers of the staff, so that the foundation of a new dragoon regiment may now be shorty looked for in Long Island.

THECOUNTERPART OF THE CELEBRATED MONte Criste."—This day published, "Count Monse-Leones or, the Spy in Society." A romance of the Carbonari of France and Italy. Translated from the French of H. de St. Georges. With illustrations. Price, 50 cents. "Count Monse-Leone" is one of the most graphic and pluquant romances in any languare. Its scene is laid in the exciting oven the which followed the second restoration, and in that wild exhal which came so near repreducing another French revolution; and which, excited as the popular mind then was, could not but have been as bloody as the first. The various secret societies, especially that of the Carbonari, legitimate descendants of the Illuminati, the schemes of their rente, or lodges, the vast purposes they meditated, are unfolded with an ability which places H. de St. Georges among the greatest of the romance writers of the day. It is not difficult to forotell for this book a popularity as great as that of the "Cuunto' Mente Oristo," with the headlon exciting interest of which its stery may be compared to no disadvantage.

Dr. A. M. Mauniczau:— Davron. May J. 1865.
My Dr.A. Bir.:—My wife has been perceptibly sinking for semethree years or more, in some queence of her great angulsh and suffering some months before and during her confinement; every successive one more and more detilitating and prostrating her, putting her life in imminent danger, and which was, on the last occasion, despaired of. I supposed this reason of things was inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the worst. At this time (now about two months.) I heard your book highly spoken of, as containing some matter reasoning my ease. On its receipt and perual. I cannot express to you sho relief it afforded my distressed mind, and she joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Desomeaux provided a stenedy. It opened a prospect to me, which I little conceived was possible. But for this, ere another year would have passed ever my head, it all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left mother-less.

would have been in her grave, and my children left mother.

It is, of course, impracticable to cenvery more fully the serious subjects breated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplithing marriage.

M. B. Medicine, has established (by his groatly superfor treatment of all private diseases) a reputation which others sorely envy him. Not only for the astoniabingly rapid cures of the disease while local, without, in many cases, using any medicines, but in those synthinities cases of months and years duration, causing the destroution of the bones for ever, and which have been under the charge of the most eminent without success, are his services so much sought for and valued; for unless the system is entirely freed from the poison, it affects the isnocent offering for generations. The written certificates the isnocent offering for generations, he is not attaid to ascert, cannot be equalled, though his preceptor were the great Ricord of Paris and Ackon of London. The certificates also include the very unfortunate-riskly subserses wickless as sheet are thousands who cannot be cured with medisines. He, therefore, especially solicite those shift oursed and abandoned cases of whatever complaint in this speciality, solicite they are shift oursed and abandoned cases of whatever complaint in this speciality, so he always gurrantees an easy and permanent ourse.
